

2021 Lienert Estate Barossa Valley Grenache

"They say Grenache is the Barossa's Pinot... bugger that! Grenache is in a class all on its own.

The first grenache in our estate range is the beginning of a long journey we're on with this spectacularly fresh and nuanced variety. This is our first attempt, and we'll continue to push the quality within the vineyard and the winery to make this wine ever more delicious. A showring example of the character of Grenache we grow on our own patch.

The vineyard is my brother John's playground, and crammed into the small acreage are 9 different clones of Grenache – cuttings taken (legally!) from vineyards in Barossa, McLaren Vale and Langhorne Creek.

For this first Grenache, we harvested and made each individual parcel separately to determine the different flavour profiles of each clone, specific to our soils and environment. We settled on a mix of Barossa and McLaren Vale clones to make the final blend.

30% of the fruit was fermented whole bunch, and remainder as whole berry. Cooler fermentation temperatures and 6 months in old French oak puncheons on MLF lees where the very simple but defining winemaking approaches taken to achieve the style we were aiming for.

Colour - Light ruby red core with pink rim

Aroma – Red fruit, cranberry, cherry, 5 spice, eucalyptus, fresh forest floor, lightly wooded forest after a rain, cured meat, prosciutto, sweet jamon fat, hazelnut, potpourri, red liquorice, floral, esters, youthful, not overly ripe, ironbark bark from whole bunch, fresh bay leaf

Palate – bursting, juicy, black pepper, fine tannin, raspberry, strawberry, tree bark, persistent fine tannin, light body, acid allowing for some juiciness and texture, very fresh fruits, whole bunch gives some savoury elements and peppery spice without being dominant, lees contact evident but is sliced through with tight acid."

PS: The wallpaper pattern that adorns the label is just that – inspired by the wallpaper in dad's study in all its 1970's glory, somewhat snazzed up for a more contemporary look. Dad would while away many hours in his study, reading with a glass of red and a couple of Rothmans, looking for the meaning of life. Grenache certainly isn't the answer to the question, but wine makes that search so much more enjoyable.
